ABOUT THE SOCIETY

The Society of Extension Education, Gujarat (SEEG) was established in 1990, is a national level professional non-profit making society for promoting study of and research in extension education in the widest sense of the term and its application in agricultural development. It is a scientific society. The head office of the society is located at Anand Agricultural University, Anand. The registration no. of society is Reg. No. 'Gujarat F / 297 / Anand'.

The society has registered 1515 life members at present. It has played a significant role in providing suitable forum for exchange of ideas, encouraging research and disseminating knowledge of extension education to the research professionals. The society organizes seminars, workshops, conferences and various programmes at national and international level on different topics of national importance. The society has also brought out several souvenirs and recommendations for scientific community.

The SEEG gives total 22 awards in various categories in order to four awards to the scientific community, Five PG & five UG awards to the student community and eight award to the farming community to inspire and motivate them for development of agricultural extension field. The society also encourages and appreciates Extension Educationalists / Scientists / Professors / Specialists for their significant contribution in the field.

The society publishes a national level peer reviewed journal "Gujarat Journal of Extension Education" with ISSN No. 2322-0678, which secured has secured 4.96 NAAS Rating effective from 1st January 2023. The first volume of research journal was released in 1990. The Gujarat Journal of Extension Education publishes by SEEG and it is a multi-disciplinary journal it includes scientific articles concerned with all aspects of extension education in general and agricultural extension in particular. The journal is peer reviewed by at least two reviewers and committed to timely publication of original research and reviewed articles. The journal publishes in the month of June & December every year and soft copy sent to university libraries, research institutes in the field of agriculture and agricultural extension science. The journal maintains review procedures through its editorial policies in order to publish the highest quality research papers.

The society also has the website www.gjoe.org which is helpful to those who are interested in agricultural extension education research. All the documents related past seminar abstracts and research journal issues have uploaded on Society's website to increase citation of research paper and more accessibility of research work as well as for the future research.

The information regarding SEEG named 'SEEG - At a Glance' and 'SEEG - Activities and Achievements' are put on our website. The Life Membership Directory is also available on website.

ETHICAL GUIDELINES FOR PEER REVIEWERS

Peer review in all its form plays an important role in ensuring the integrity of the scholarly record. The process depends to a large extent on trust, and requires that everyone involved behaves responsibly and ethically. Peer reviewers play a central and critical part in the peer-review process, but too often come to the role without any guidance and may be unaware of their ethical obligations. The COPE Ethical Guidelines for Peer Reviewers set out the basic principles and standards to which all peer reviewers should adhere during the peer-review process. It is hoped they will provide helpful guidance to researchers, be a reference for journals and editors in guiding their reviewers, and act as an educational resource for institutions in training their students and researchers.

Basic principles to which peer reviewers should follow

Peer reviewers should:

1. Only agree to review manuscripts for which they have the subject expertise required to carry out a proper assessment and which they can assess in a timely manner.
2. Respect the confidentiality of peer review and not reveal any details of a manuscript or its review, during or after the peer-review process, beyond those that are released by the journal.
3. Not use information obtained during the peer-review process for their own or any other person's or organization's advantage, or to disadvantage or discredit others.
4. Declare all potential conflicting of interests, seeking advice from the journal if they are unsure whether something constitutes a relevant interest.
5. Not allow their reviews to be influenced by the origins of a manuscript, by the nationality, religious or political beliefs, gender or other characteristics of the authors, or by commercial considerations.
6. Be objective and constructive in their reviews, refraining from being hostile or inflammatory and from making libellous or derogatory personal comments.
7. Acknowledge that peer review is mostly a reciprocal endeavour and undertake to carry out their fair share of reviewing and in a timely manner.
8. Provide journals with personal and professional information that is accurate and a true representation of their expertise.
9. Recognize that impersonation of another individual during the review process is considered serious misconduct.

Expectations during the Peer Review Process

On being approached to review

Peer reviewers should:

1. Declare if they do not have the subject expertise required to carry out the review or if they are able to assess only part of the manuscript, outlining clearly the areas for which they have the relevant expertise.

2. Only agree to review a manuscript if they are fairly confident they can return a review within the proposed or mutually agreed time-frame, informing the journal promptly if they require an extension.
3. Declare any potentially conflicting or competing interests (which may, for example, be personal, financial, intellectual, professional, political or religious), seeking advice from the journal if they are unsure whether something constitutes a relevant interest.
4. Follow journals' policies on situations they consider to represent a conflict to reviewing. If no guidance is provided, they should inform the journal.
5. Inform If, authors work at the same institution as any of the authors (or will be joining that institution or are applying for a job there); they are or have been recent (e.g. within the past 3 years) mentors, mentees, close collaborators or joint grant holders; they have a close personal relationship with any of the authors.
6. Review afresh any manuscript they have previously reviewed for another journal as it may have changed between the two submissions and the journals' criteria for evaluation and acceptance may be different.
7. Ensure suggestions for alternative reviewers are based on suitability and not influenced by personal considerations or made with the intention of the manuscript receiving a specific outcome (either positive or negative).
8. Decline to review if they feel unable to provide a fair and unbiased review.
9. Decline to review if they have been involved with any of the work in the manuscript or its reporting.
10. Decline to review if asked to review a manuscript that is very similar to one they have in preparation or under consideration at another journal.
11. Decline to review if they have issues with the peer-review model used by a journal (e.g. it uses open review and releases the reviewers' names to the authors) that would either affect their review or cause it to be invalidated because of their inability to comply with the journal's review policies.

During Review

Peer reviewers should:

1. Notify the journal immediately and seek advice if they discover either a conflicting interest that wasn't apparent when they agreed to the review or anything that might prevent them providing a fair and unbiased review.
2. Refrain from looking at the manuscript and associated material while awaiting instructions from a journal on issues that might cause the request to review to be rescinded.
3. Read the manuscript, ancillary material (e.g. reviewer instructions, required ethics and policy statements, supplemental data files) and journal instructions thoroughly, getting back to the journal if anything is not clear and requesting any missing or incomplete items they need to carry out a full review.
4. Notify the journal as soon as possible if they find they do not have the expertise to assess all aspects of the manuscript; they shouldn't wait until submitting their review as this will unduly delay the review process.

5. Not involve anyone else in the review of a manuscript, including junior researchers they are mentoring, without first obtaining permission from the journal; the names of any individuals who have helped them with the review should be included with the returned review so that they are associated with the manuscript in the journal's records and can also receive due credit for their efforts.
6. Keep all manuscript and review details confidential.
7. Contact the journal if circumstances arise that will prevent them from submitting a timely review, providing an accurate estimate of the time they will need to do a review if still asked to do so.
8. In the case of double-blind review, if they suspect the identity of the author(s) notify the journal if this knowledge raises any potential conflict of interest.
9. Notify the journal immediately if they come across any irregularities, have concerns about ethical aspects of the work, are aware of substantial similarity between the manuscript and a concurrent submission to another journal or a published article, or suspect that misconduct may have occurred during either the research or the writing and submission of the manuscript; reviewers should, however, keep their concerns confidential and not personally investigate further unless the journal asks for further information or advice.
10. Not intentionally prolong the review process, either by delaying the submission of their review or by requesting unnecessary additional information from the journal or author.
11. Ensure their review is based on the merits of the work and not influenced, either positively or negatively, by any personal, financial, or other conflicting considerations or by intellectual biases.
12. Not contact the authors directly without the permission of the journal.

When Preparing the Report

Peer reviewers should:

1. Bear in mind that the editor is looking to them for subject knowledge, good judgment, and an honest and fair assessment of the strengths and weaknesses of the work and the manuscript.
2. Make clear at the start of their review if they have been asked to address only specific parts or aspects of a manuscript and indicate which these are.
3. Follow journals' instructions on the specific feedback that is required of them and, unless there are good reasons not to, the way this should be organized.
4. Be objective and constructive in their reviews and provide feedback that will help the authors to improve their manuscript.
5. Not make derogatory personal comments or unfounded accusations.
6. Be specific in their criticisms, and provide evidence with appropriate references to substantiate general statements such as, 'this work has been done before', to help editors in their evaluation and decision and in fairness to the authors.

7. Remember it is the authors' paper and not attempt to rewrite it to their own preferred style if it is basically sound and clear; suggestions for changes that improve clarity are, however, important.
8. Be aware of the sensitivities surrounding language issues that are due to the authors writing in a language that is not their own, and phrase the feedback appropriately and with due respect.
9. Make clear which suggested additional investigations are essential to support claims made in the manuscript under consideration and which will just strengthen or extend the work.
10. Not prepare their report in such a way or include comments that suggest the review has been done by another person.
11. Not prepare their report in a way that reflects badly or unfairly on another person.
12. Not make unfair negative comments or include unjustified criticisms of any competitors' work that is mentioned in the manuscript.
13. Ensure their comments and recommendations for the editor are consistent with their report for the authors; most feedback should be put in the report for the authors.
14. Confidential comments to the editor should not be a place for denigration or false accusation, done in the knowledge that the authors will not see these comments.
15. Not suggest that authors include citations to the reviewer's (or their associates') work merely to increase the reviewer's (or their associates') citation count or to enhance the visibility of their or their associates' work; suggestions must be based on valid academic or technological reasons.
16. Determine whether the journal allows them to sign their reviews and, if it does, decide as they feel comfortable doing.
17. If they are the editor handling a manuscript and decide themselves to provide a review of that manuscript, do this transparently and not under the guise of an anonymous review if the journal operates blind review; providing a review for a manuscript being handled by another editor at the journal can be treated as any other review.

Expectation post review

Peer reviewers should:

1. Continue to keep details of the manuscript and its review confidential.
2. Respond promptly if contacted by a journal about matters related to their review of a manuscript and provide the information required.
3. Contact the journal if anything relevant comes to light after they have submitted their review that might affect their original feedback and recommendations.
4. Read the reviews from the other reviewers, if these are provided by the journal, to improve their own understanding of the topic or the decision reached.
5. Try to accommodate requests from journals to review revisions or resubmissions of manuscripts they have reviewed.

- All material (i.e. figures/images and tables) used with the permission of the original sources
- Bibliography

Acceptance Level

- Introduction and literature review portion up to 15%
- Remaining Material up to 10%
- Overall similarity index should be less than 15%

ETHICS POLICY

The publication of an article in a peer-reviewed journal is an essential building block in the development of a coherent and respected network of knowledge. It is a direct reflection of the quality of work of the author and the institutions that support them. Peer-reviewed articles support and embody the scientific method. It is therefore important to agree upon standards of expected ethical behaviour.

Ethics topics to consider when publishing:

- (1) Authorship of the paper: Authorship should be limited to those who have made a significant contribution to the conception, design, execution or interpretation of the reported study.
- (2) Originality and plagiarism: The authors should ensure that they have written entirely original works and if the authors have used the work and/or words of others that this has been appropriately cited or quoted.
- (3) Data access and retention: Authors may be asked to provide the raw data in connection with a paper for editorial review and should be prepared to provide public access to such data.
- (4) Multiple, redundant or concurrent publication: An author should not in general publish manuscripts describing essentially the same research in more than one journal or primary publication. The SEEG does not view the following uses of a work as prior publication: publication in the form of an abstract; publication as an academic thesis; publication as an electronic preprint. Information on prior publication is included within each SEEG journal Guide for Authors.
- (5) Acknowledgement of sources: proper acknowledgement.
- (6) Disclosure and conflicts of interest: All submissions must include disclosure of all relationships that could be viewed as presenting a potential conflict of interest.
- (7) Fundamental errors in published works: When an author discovers a significant error or inaccuracy in his/her own published work, it is the author's obligation to promptly notify the journal editor or publisher and cooperate with the editor to retract or correct the paper.
- (8) Reporting standards: Authors of reports of original research should present an accurate account of the work performed as well as an objective discussion of its significance.
- (9) Hazards and human or animal subjects: Statements of compliance are required if the work involves chemicals, procedures or equipment that has any unusual hazards inherent in their use or if it involves the use of animal or human subjects.
- (10) Use of patient images or case details: Studies on patients or volunteers require ethics committee approval and informed consent, which should be documented in the paper.
